CAPT. COLMESNEIL DEAD

This Well Known I. C. Railroad Conductor Succumbs To Fatal Illness.

HAD BEEN ILL FOR MANY WEEKS

Death relieved the sufferings of Capt. William T. Colmesneil, after being bedridden for several weeks at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Letcher's Hospital. He had been afflicted with heart trouble and dropsy for some time and was compelled, because of his weakened condition, to give up his position as conductor of the Illinois Central railroad company, after being in their service almost a score of years.

Mr. Colmesneil was a very close friend of Dr. Letcher of this city, and when he was taken sick in Evansville his one desire was to be placed under his care. Therefore, accordingly, he was brought here about three weeks ago. About ten days later he was stricken with paralysis which afflicted his whole left side and since that time grew steadily weaker until death relieved him of his sufferings yesterday afternoon. From the time he was taken down with paralysis the attending physician gave up hopes of his recovery and said that the end would be but the course of several days at most. He was fifty-eight years old on January 28.

Before entering the service of the Illinois Central Mr. Colmesneil was connected with the old Ohio Valley railroad company as when that line was purchased by the I. C. he still retained his position with that company.

Captain Colmesneil was born January 28 1849 at Parquet Springs, near Louisville, and resided there until after the breaking out of the Civil War. When but a mere boy he enlisted in the Confederate army to fight for his commonwealth and his country.

After the war he entered the railroad service and served on various roads until shortly after the construction of the old Ohio Valley when he was made conductor with a run between Henderson and Princeton.

The deceased leaves besides his widow, two sons, Thomas, eighteen years old, and Charles, fourteen years.—Henderson Gleaner.

Pilot Dead at Wheel

Pittsburg, Pa., April 5.—With the spoke of the pilot wheel clutch in a death grip and hand extended toward the bell rope, Geo. W. Conant was found lying dead in the pilot house of the packet Lorena, near East Liverpool, Ohio at an early hour today.

Without a guiding hand, the big packet filled with passengers, who were peacefully sleeping, wandered thither thru the dense fog and was running at high speed into a studded pool when Capt. Jno. Richardson stopped the craft from running to destruction.

Took Her Ring to "Match" It.

St. Louis, Mo., April 3.—When Miss Mattie Shipley, twenty-eight years old, three weeks ago set her wedding for April 1 she forgot that it was All Fools Day. She says she pledged her heart and hand to a man thirty years old, who gave his name as W. S. Hodges, and his address as Maysville, Kentucky.

Hodges, according to Miss Shipley's story to the police, wooed her in real Kentucky style. Saturday he told her that he was going down town to buy a diamond engagement and gold wedding ring and ask her what style of diamond she preferred. Miss Shipley says she gave him her diamond ring and told him to match it. Hodges did not return, and there was no wedding.

Gilbert-Conger.

Sunday evening just as a shower came up Miss Lilly Gilbert and Mr. Charley Conger drove up to the residence of Rev. W. T. Oakley on East Bellville street and were united in marriage. They did not get out of the buggy altho it was raining, but drove away as happy as larks as soon as the Rev. Oakley had finished the ceremony.

The bride is an unusually pretty girl and is the daughter of Patrick Gilbert, a well known citizen who resides three miles North of the city.

The groom is a son of the late Pate Conger and is a young man of fine character.

The happy couple were accompanied by Mr. Albert Conger, brother of the groom, and Miss Alma Postleweight, daughter of Squire J. R. Postleweight.

The RECORD-PRESS wishes them much joy.

J. F. Porter Announces.

Hon. J. F. Porter announces in this issue of the Enterprise as a candidate for Representative of Webster county, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Mr. Porter needs no introduction from us, for he is the best known man in the county. He has served his county most creditably in many ways and is a man of unquestioned ability. His record as a Representative in the past as county court clerk, then State Senator, and later on the State Board of Equalization, is open to all. While in the Senate Mr. Porter made a strenuous fight in behalf of the school children of the State as their champion for cheaper books and was the author of the measure making the common school term six months instead of five.—Providence Enterprise.

Burglar Attacks Farmer in Bed.

Paducah, Ky., April 3.—Edward McElya, a farmer of the Hinkleville section, a few miles from Paducah, was robbed of $140 and badly beaten last night. He retired early and had just gotten into bed, when a large man crawled from under the bed, club in hand. He beat the prostrate farmer into divulging the hiding place of his money. McElya is in a serious condition and bloodhounds are being sent to trace the fugitive.

Disappears at Covington.

Covington, Ky., April 3.—L. G. Thomson, son of Peter G. Thomson, the millionaire president of the Champion-Coated Paper Mills, of Hamilton, O., is missing. His empty automobile was discovered by the watchmen at the plant of the Bavarian Brewing company here early this morning. In answer to inquiries the young man's mother said that her son had visited friends in Covington last night. Thomson's gloves were found in the automobile, and this led to the identification of the machine.

PATHETIC INCIDENTS

Connected With Suicide of Mrs. Roach at The Frankfort Penitentiary Last Week.

WAS SENTENCED FROM DIXON, KY.

Frankfort, Ky., April 2.—Pathetic indeed are the incidents connected with the suicide of Mrs. Emma Roach, of Webster county, at the penitentiary yesterday. The remains of the unfortunate woman have been shipped to her former home at Dixon.

The letter to the prison commissioner asking for a parole gives the details of the crimes and the things which led her to kill her former husband. It was thru a mother's love for her child, she declared that drove her to fire the fatal shot. The letter, dated November 10, 1906, is as follows:

Frankfort, Ky., State Prison, Nov. 10, 1906.—Commissioner Brown:—Kind Sir, I was sentenced from Dixon Ky., for shooting and killing my divorced husband Gholson Teague. I had come from Homer Ill., to visit, where I was living with my second husband, Charles Roach. He had let me come back to my old home to visit my dear old father and two brothers. I had with me my two little daughters, Vera, who is just blossoming into young womanhood, and my little brown-eyed baby Ruth.

The court gave me both my little girls and alimony, which he, Mr. Teague, and his son by a former marriage, tried to beat me out of, as I enclosed letter will show. Mr. Teague abused me, until at last I reached the limit of human endurance my health was all broken down and I appealed to the law for protection from that man, as he was a habitual drunkard. After spending a few happy weeks with my father and two brothers, I made my arrangements to go back to my distant home.

When Mr. Teague found out I was going he said I should never take my baby back with me.

Then he or some one started the report that I had sold my children that I fought so hard for all the days before. I was to start away the next morning. He followed and made all sorts of threats against me, and being afraid of him and thinking my life in danger, and knowing he would try to take my baby by force, I concealed a pistol and took my little girls and my two brothers went with me to the depot to bid me goodbye. Richard and Robert Crenshaw. As I was standing in the waiting room holding my baby by the hand, he, Teague, came up and attempted to snatch her from me. I held on to her precious little form, and oh, how dear she was to me at that moment, I never loved my baby quite so much as then. I begged him to let go, and when my brothers saw us struggling they came to my rescue. Just as they took hold of him, in that awful, moment shot him I seem to have lost all reason, and being sick and nervous, I shot him one time.

My little daughters are and always have been, my most precious treasures, and God in heaven knows that my poor brothers are innocent and had no part in the trouble. They are implicated just because they had their hands on him, trying to reason with him, trying get him to give up my baby but I was so crazed at that time that I was not responsible for what I did.

You know, Dear Mr. Brown that it's the nature of the lowest creature that lives on earth to fight for her young and how much more would it be the nature of a human mother to fight for her young. I did not want hurt the man. I was only thinking of my little delicate, tender child that was being so cruelly torn away from me. I was so blinded by grief and despair that I did not realize what I was doing.

I knew that my baby was in danger.

I did not have a just and fair trial or I would never have been convicted, and to think of my brothers being so unjustly confined. It was I who did the shooting. Not them. Oh, what true mother would not fight for her children that she suffered and brought into the world. My oldest daughter, Vera, fifteen years of age, needs my care and protection now more than ever. I do so want her to be educated, and my little baby Ruth is such a delicate child and does need a mother's love and care so much. But, if you cannot find it in your heart to give me my freedom, won't you please give my two brothers their freedom. Richard has a wife and a sweet little baby who needs his care so much, and my dear old father needs my brother Robert's assistance so much, and they are innocent. Oh, I do want to be free so I can take care of my little girls once more, but if you can't open your heart and let me have my liberty once more, won't you please give my poor innocent brothers their freedom? I beg of you in God's name to grant a broken-hearted mother and sister's prayers. I remain your humble servant. Mrs. Emma Roach.

BRONCHIAL TROUBLES

Readily Yield to Soothing, Healing Treatment of Hyomei

Bronchial troubles are purely local. They cannot be helped by stomach dosing. They are caused by irritation in the air passages and can be relieved and cured by medicated air alone. In this lies the secret of the great success of Hy-o-mei in the treatment of bronchial troubles.

The first breath of Hy-o-mei's medicated air soothes the inflammation, stops the cough, and relief soon becomes permanent and a cure results.

Hy-o-mei has made many remarkable cures in the worst and most chronic forms of bronchial troubles and is sold by Haynes & Taylor with the same guarantee as they give when Hy-o-mei is purchased for catarrh, that is, to refund the money if the remedy does not give satisfaction. The complete outfit costs but $1.00.

Newspaper Changes.

The past week has witnessed more newspaper changes than ever before known in the history of Madisonville. Dan Wilson has severed his connection with The Hustler and has gone with the Journal. J. E. Fawcett, of the Earlington Bee, has bought T. C. O'Bryan's interest in the Hustler and will take charge before a great while, while the Adams brothers who have been connected with the Graphic, and Chas. P. Morehead, of Morgantown, Ky., have made arrangements to go to Morgantown and establish a new paper. If there are any other newspaper changes in the town to note, we have not as yet been able to catch on.—Ex.

Trading in Real Estate.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Gugenheim have purchased the Maxwell residence on the corner of Main and Depot streets and will occupy it in the near future. Jesse Olive has purchased the Judge James A. Moore residence on the corner of Gum and Main streets and will occupy it soon.

H. H. Sayre and family will occupy the Rowe Williams property as soon as vacated by Mr. Olive and family.

The Baptist church will soon begin to take form. Already the brick and heavy lumber are on the ground and ere long the work on the beautiful edifice will begin. The plans for this church are models of perfection and beauty, and this structure promises to be a joy to Marion.

Gus Taylor has the carpenters beginning on the plans and specifications for his house which is to be a commodious brick. As soon as he chooses his contractor the work will proceed and be pushed as rapidly as possible.

T. H. Cochran will build a substantial brick residence at once on his lot next to the P. S. Maxwell residence on Main street.

Mrs. M. E. Croft will build a two story brick on her lot recently purchased of P. S. Maxwell.

Bride and Groom Are Burned to Death.

Sutton, W. Va., April 3.—Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Garee, of this place, were burned to death tonight when Riverview Hotel was destroyed by fire.

Dr. and Mrs. Garee were married yesterday at Moundsville, W. Va., and were enroute to the home of the groom's mother where the wedding supper was awaiting their coming.

Garee had just finished his medical education and intended practice.

Sunday School Convention.

The meeting of the county Sunday School Convention, will be held this year probably in July, near Marion in the woodland, at the foot of Wilson hill, which is being cleared up of all under growth and bushes, and put in fine condition for such a meeting. The woodland are accessible from several roads and as there is abundance of water for man and beast, it would seem an ideal place for a Sunday school convention and picnic dinner.

GREAT DISCOVERY IN FUEL

John Ellmore, Poor Cobbler Inventor.
Courtied by Rival Kings.

EDISON EXPERT ADMITS ITS IMPORTANCE

Altoona, Pa., March 27.—John Ellmore, the cobbler genius whose invention may change the entire coal industry, may never give his discovery to the world. Today he was loath to talk of the process of which he was lately so communicative. The mysterious solution has been so successfully demonstrated that it has scared large mine owners and operators, and the talk is today that Ellmore has been offered an almost fabulous sum if he would destroy his secret or sell it outright.

Today there has been a sharp conflict between local capitalists, who would finance a company to market the wonderful fuel, and emissaries of the vast coal interests of this section of the state. Financiers here see great fortunes ahead if they can prevail upon the cobbler to co-operate with them, but since he has guarded his secret for more than a quarter of a century he is reluctant to cast aside great wealth that is actually within his grasp, and that would accrue from the deposition of his secret with the coal producing interests, for the burden of business which would devolve upon him were he to accept the proposal of co-operation.

As Ellmore sat at his bench to-night pegging the heel on a school-boy's shoe, he intimated that his dream of wealth was about to be realized. In a few days he will get his answer from the bidders for his secret. It was evident from his manner that the bait of the coal operators was the one which would tempt him.

In his illiterate style he referred to the visit of the capitalists and coal interests' representatives, and broadly hinted that he had been offered close to a million dollars for his invention, and that he would accept it, and that with this fortune he would exploit an invention which he says will revolutionize the automobile world.

"If any person, cobbler or chemist, has discovered a method whereby water may be dissociated so that oxygen and hydrogen, of which it is composed, are brought into combination, with the consequent tremendous heat, he has made a discovery of great scientific importance."

This was the view taken yesterday by Frank S. Dyer, of the Edison laboratories, where the study of the production of heat of high potency and at the least cost has been a subject of study and experimentation for years. The expression was drawn forth by the publication in the World yesterday in which was related the remarkable discovery of John Ellmore, who after a quarter century of effort, has produced a compound which he has demonstrated reduces the cost of coal used as fuel from 60 to 75 per cent. While Mr. Dyer could not be said to speak for Thos. A. Edison, who is in Florida, he represented the scientific end of the great electrical establishment in such a degree that he spoke with authority.

"I could not undertake to pass an opinion on something I have not seen," said Mr. Dyer, "but if the demonstrations as you describe them took place, it would appear as if the inventor has been working in the direction of resolving water into its original elements and employing coal ashes as a vehicle to absorb the caloric."

Oxygen and hydrogen in their gaseous form, when brought into combination, develop a heat of great intensity, and it may be that this ignorant cobbler has succeeded in bringing about a result which has not been successful after years of study. It may be that the compound he uses brings about this dissociation of the water in the moistened ashes and coal, and creates the gas which gives the fire its greater force and vitality.

Prof. Parker, of the Department of Physics, of Columbia University, had read the dispatch from Altoona with more than ordinary interest, but he was not willing to subscribe to the correctness of the theory of the cobbler that a chemical agent had been discovered which would make an inert and exhausted material capable of being used as one of utility in recombination. He had not seen the demonstration himself, but he took it for granted that the claim made by the Altoona cobbler was not susceptible of practical demonstration.

"I read the article," he said, "but from the scientific view there is nothing in it. The whole principle, so far as I can determine, is that the dissociation of the water vapor which comes from the heat, causes the fire to grow hotter, but that is not new."

"There have been a great many of these so-called fuel savers on the market for years, and for the most part they have consisted of saline solutions or packages of salt in bulk. The greater part of coal ashes taken from furnaces and stoves has not been perfectly consumed. Thrown back with a hot fire beneath, it will be resolved into a molten mass, just as this fuel treated with the compound is said to become."

Hard Times in Kansas

The old days of grasshoppers and drouth are almost forgotten in the prosperous Kansas of today; although a citizen of Codell, Earl Shamburg, has not yet forgotten a hard time he encountered. He says: "I was worn out and discouraged by coughing night and day, and could find no relief until I tried Dr. King's Now Discovery. It took less than one bottle to completely cure me." The safest and most reliable cough and cold cure and lung and throat healer ever discovered. Guaranteed by J. H. Orme druggist. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Be Cheerful.

Whatever it may cost, leave home in the morning with a smile and a cheerful good-bye. Just suppose that you should come back home to find that the voice you love best is forever hushed and the eye whose loving glance you most care for, is forever closed; suppose you should have to go on living with the recollection of that fretful, or bitter, or angry mother in mind!

Kiss mother good-bye every morning; or if she should not be within reach, call back a bright, cheerful good-bye, whatever your mood, and give her a good wish for the day.—Our Country for March.

Good Judgment

is the essential characteristic of men and women. Invaluable to good business men and necessary to housewives. A woman shows good judgment when she buys White's Cream Vermifuge for her baby. The best worm medicine offered to mothers. Many indeed are the sensible mothers, who write expressing their gratitude for the good health of their children, which they owe to the use of White's Cream Vermifuge. Sold by J. H. Orme.

Napoleon and His Books.

Wherever Napoleon went he took a library of books with him; and hampered by their number, he would throw the "overflow" out of the carriage window. In the arrangement of his libraries he observed the same carefulness that characterized him in other matters. Each book had its particular place in its case, and he knew his books so well that he could at any moment place his hand on the volume he desired; and if a book was missing he could describe its size and the color of its binding, and could tell his librarian where it might have been wrongly put, and the case in which it properly.—Our Country for March.

It cures indigestion and sick headache and chronic constipation. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup does not nauseate or gripe and is mild and pleasant to take. Refuse substitutes. J. H. Orme.

Fallen Asleep.

Little Oliver Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brown, departed this life March 16th, 1907. His age was about seven years. He suffered from that dreadful disease spinal meningitis, and was sick only a few short hours. His death was a great shock to his parents, this being the only child they had ever been blessed with, he was the idol of his parent's hearts. But alas! just as he was blossoming into youth, God laid the hand of afflictions on him and took him from their fond embrace, but weep not father and mother, for your darling child, but seek that preparation of heart whereby you can say I will meet him when done with the trials of this life, for God says in his blessed word "suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." God is an all-wise God, and uses means to accomplish his ends, and I believe that sometimes God calls our loved ones away that it may be a warning to us to love and serve him. The remains of little Oliver, was laid to rest in the Asbridge cemetery to await the resurrection morning. Rev. Oliver made a very impressive talk over the remains.

Oh not in cruelty not in wrath,
The reaper came that day, it was angel visited this green earth.

Worth Remembering.

Men should remember that a woman can't always be smiling who has to cook dinner, answer the door bell half a dozen times, and get rid of a neighbor who has dropped in, attend to a sick baby, tie up the eut of a two year-old, gather up the play things of a four year old, tie up the feet of a six-year-old on skates and get an eight-year-old ready for school, to say nothing of sweeping, cleaning etc. A woman with all this to contend with may claim it is a privilege to look and feel a little tired sometimes, and a word of sympathy would not be too much to expect from a man who, during the honeymoon, wouldn't let her carry so much as a sunshade

Is Death in a Kiss?

Dr. Allen, the chief health officer of Louisville, who has inaugurated a crusade against spitting on the streets of Louisville, is now writing scientific essay against "Kissing, the Danger Therein, Etc." A correspondent of the Times, signing himself "Yocum From Missouri," takes the doctor to task, in the following forcible language.

Science is enlarging our heads, commercialism dwarfing our hearts. In field and in factory, in country lane and in city street are heard the roar, the clank and rattle of machinery. No recess too secluded, no precinct too sacred to its disturbing din. Man himself, like the great corporation which he fathers, is fast evolving into soulless machine—cold, mechanical, passionless but for the one greedy dollar-grasping impulse. Today bold business bids sweet sentiment begone. Science searches and discovers germs, microbes, bacilli, direct and deadly enemies of health, and thus indirect murderers of sentiment.

It has been discovered, or at least declared, that to kiss is not only imprudent, but also dangerous. Ye shades of Cleopatra and Ella Wheeler Wilcox! To kiss dangerous? Now wouldn't that jar your molars? The chief health officer of Louisville declares that this world-old practice of lovers "is never in order." Skidoo, Doc, Skidoo! Much investigation hath made these mad. "To kiss," says this M. D., "indicates lack of culture." Faith, Doc, thou hast some crotchets in thy head now. If only the uncultured, the hoi polloi osetate, then alas! of what common clay the heroes and heroines of whom our romancers have writ and our poets sung.

Our city too cultured to kiss! We don't believe it, not we! If true, O fair city, wipe thyself from off the map, or hike out to Boston. Got it in himmel! Dost the mother's kiss put in jeopardy the sweet babe's budding life? Shall the bride's warm, ruby smuck suggest dread disease and death? Shall the lover's salute but preclude gloom of stygian shades. O ghostly germs! O murderous microbes! O blighting bacilli! Forsooth! Fiddlesticks! Shall man be denied this fond expression of the truest passion of the human heart? And wherefore, pray? That to life's little span may be added a few short meters? Prithee, Doc, thou sawbones, thou lobster, get thee to a monastery. What cared Tennyson's or Marlowe's soulful folks for culture or microbes, the one when she exclaimed:

"O love! O fire once he drew With one long kiss my whole soul through My lips, as sunlight drinketh dew."
When Dan Cupid shall break his bow and cast away his arrows, and the divine Architect shall forever cease to fashion fair Venuses with rosebud lips surcharged with honeyed sweetness or those lips grow colorless and cold, and when maternal love dies out of the mother's breast and over the alters of the lover's heart gather the gray ashes of dead hopes and dying affection, then may Science and the M. D.'s proclaim the reign of culture, cry kissing out of order, and list for the Crack o' Doom.—Exchange.

THE REASONABLE HOPE.

Experience and observation whisper that Nature never wastes any treasure, that she gathers up all fragments and that in her texture of gold and purple no stitches are broken and no threads are dropped. Following some unseen leader, every thing is climbing up and marching on. The very things that seem wasteful, when a little time has passed, are found to be salvatory. The roseleaf that falls to-day lends a richer red to the morrow's petals. The foliage that falls from this year's oak makes next year's leaf holds a finer luster. The sand slabs still preserve the track of the bird.

The air is a whispering gallery on which thoughts are written upon an imperishable scroll, when the householder builds a mansion, he stores it with art treasure, with object of use and beauty, that loved ones may enjoy and use and hand on front generation to generation and century to century. And thank you that God builds the house of man's soul, and makes it beautiful with the hereditary treasure of a thousand artist ancestors, only to pull it down in death, and blakeu it with ruin? Thou foolish doubter!—Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis in The Delinator for April.

Out of Sight

"Out of sight, out of mind," is an old saying which applies with special force to a sore, burn or wound that's been treated with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's out of sight, out of mind and out of existence. Piles too and chilblains disappear under its healing influence. Guaranteed by J. H. Orme.

When it comes to afternoon papers, the Louisville Times can not be beat. The Times covers the new field fully, and it prints the truth without fear or favor. Its editorials are short, crisp and timely, and it has a definite policy and sticks to it.

Nervous Worn-Out

If you are in this condition, your nerve force is weak—the power is giving out, the organs of your body have "slowed up," and do their work imperfectly. This failure to do the work required, clogs the system and brings distress and disease. When the nerves are weak the heart is unable to force the life-giving blood through your veins; the stomach fails to digest food; the kidneys lack power to filter impurities from the blood, and the poisonous waste remains in the system to breed disease. Nerve energy must be restored. Dr. Miles' Nerveine will do it, because it strengthens the nerves; it is a nerve medicine and tonic, that rebuilds the entire nervous system.

"Several years ago I was all broken down. I was nervous, worn-out, could not sleep, and was in constant pain. I doctored for months, and finally the doctor said he could do nothing for me. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nerveine, and used altogether eight bottles, and I became strong and healthy, and now weigh 170 pounds."—H. C. CUNNINGHAM, 108 Elsworth Ave., Allegheny, Pa. Dr. Miles' Nerveine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind

Compulsory Arbitration a Menace to Organized Labor

By ARTHUR M. WATSON,
Secretary Carpenters' District Council, Boston.

CERTAIN organizations of employers who have been unsuccessful in their efforts to discredit labor organizations, to curtail their power, and to nullify their efforts to secure better conditions for the toiling masses; who have failed in their campaign of constant litigation and persecution in the courts to disrupt one single international union, are now seeking to create a sentiment in favor of compulsory arbitration.

Our rights as labor unions proceed from our rights as individuals, and we contend that our legal rights to act collectively should go as far as our individual rights. Confronted as we are to-day by immigration unprecedented in history, and by the constant army of unemployed, we realize that it is folly for individuals to make terms with the great corporations who conduct the most of the business of the country.

Collectively we can in some instances successfully combat them. Under present conditions we are not very liable to extract anything unreasonable from society. Very few who work for wages in the cities of the land will ever own their own homes, ride in their own carriages, or properly educate their children. We want all these things which go to make life pleasant.

From whence shall the power to compel arbitration proceed. From the courts? Had we the workers, the same influence in appointments to the bench as those who in this connection we must consider as our adversaries, we might consent. There are so few decisions on record from the courts favoring our contentions that we do not wish to add to their power; the gag is being drawn tighter daily to prohibit the collective action which is our constitutional right. True, labor disputes are some times vexatious to the general public, but without strife it is impossible to secure better conditions, and we do not wish to lose one atom of the rights still accorded us.

To sum up the matter: Compulsory arbitration might reduce the membership of labor unions to a state which might be called involuntary servitude. I can conceive of no practical plan whereby this can come to pass without giving undue advantage to the property-owning and privileged classes of the community.

We must admit that labor is a necessity; employers may be considered as a necessary evil. We, in our desire for better living; they, in their desire for profits, must necessarily clash at times. Out of all these things comes good in the end.

That Fortunate American Girl

By PAUL BOURGET.
Famous French Novelist and Academician.

That which first strikes the traveler who has heard so much of the American girl is the utter impossibility of distinguishing her from the married woman. The fact that is so often commented on in Europe, that she goes about alone and unattended, is not the whole cause of the confusion. The similarity goes much farther. They wear the same jewels and the same toilets; they enjoy the same liberty of laughing and talking; they read the same books; they have the same gestures, the same full-blown beauty and, thanks to the invention of the chaperon, there is not a theater or restaurant party or tea to which they do not go alone and at the invitation of any man of their acquaintances.

The younger the chaperon is the better she is liked. The young widow or the "grass widow," that is, the young wife separated, divorced or simply living away from her husband, fills the conditions of the role to perfection.

That is to say, three young girls, sitting in company with three young men and the said chaperon at Delmonico's, or taking tea with another young man, are as free as if they had no one to answer for them except themselves. This habit of governing themselves without control is responsible for their remarkable self-assurance.

The divorce suits which the newspapers publish in full prove that this young person had as much good sense as she had beauty. For my part, and after having studied human conditions closely, I believe that for a young man of 20 or 25 the best chances of happiness are to be born of a good English family and to study at Oxford, but for a young girl it is to be born an American, with a father who made his fortune in mines, railways or land speculation, and enter New York or Washington society under the wing of excellent sponsors.

Plea for New National Church

By JOHN AUGUSTUS WALL,
President National Church.

door:

Many people will have many different beliefs, and this state of affairs will always exist; but why can we not respect these petty differences when they stand in the way of progress, and at the same time organize for mutual inspiration and helpfulness? Are honest atheists, infidels, moralists, Spiritualists, Jews, Christians and Ethical Culturists always to remain at odds with each other?

I would like a church or party broad enough to interest and hold all intelligent thinkers whether orthodox or unorthodox, so long as they believed in being kind and helpful. I want to take the hand of the believer in Darwin, Huxley, Emerson, Paine and Ingersoll along with the hand of the noble mother whose only faith is in Christianity. I want to cement all these various shades of opinion by the divine power of love—to have them all join in singing the songs of a common brotherhood.

I want a plain, common-sense church—a people's church free of all superstition, hypocrisy and dead-century rules—an institutional-industrial society that shall stand for the greater advancement of civic and ethical knowledge—a militant, twentieth-century organization that should by the power of intelligent co-operation drive out the rule of gold and bring in the Golden Rule.

THURSDAY, APRIL 11, 1907.

We are authorized to announce
R. H. THOMAS

a candidate for Assessor, to fill out the unexpired term of J. Anthony Davidson, subject to the action of the Republican party. He endorses the local option law.

Mr. Harriman announces that he is going to "give more attention to the public." Hands on your pocketbooks!

Manchuria comes to the front of civilization with a railroad collision which killed seventeen people and injured thirty-five.

Japan will never become Christianized enough to celebrate Easter Sunday until the Japanese women are taught to wear hats.

The Filipinos are to have an election this year and we shall find out whether they or the Cubans are better fitted for self-government.

The Democrats are rapidly dividing into classes—those who swear by Bryan and those who swear at him. The Republicans seem to be in the same mood as to Roosevelt.

A Chicago woman sued for divorce because her husband told her she resembled one of her aunts. After a look at the aunt, the court awarded the divorce.

Doctors find that the average human soul weighs an ounce. No scales delicate enough to weigh the brain of a doctor who believes in this sort of tomfoolery have been manufactured.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Can Roosevelt Explain?

Mr. E. H. Harriman's statement, in the letter to Sidney Webster, that the president sent for and personally solicited him to raise $200,000 for the Republican campaign in New York in 1904 is so startling that one reads it almost as if in a dream.

If Mr. Harriman is not mistaken the president is convicted of hypocrisy such as few have heretofore deemed him capable of. That the president while threatening war upon the railroad monopolies should have accepted aid for his own re-election from one of the greatest of railroad monopolists is a revelation that no one could believe if it came from any other source than Mr. Harriman himself.

It is evident that Mr. Harriman on the eve of the election of 1904 did not believe in the sincerity of Mr. Roosevelt's propaganda of railroad regulation. If he felt that there was danger of a crusade of that kind his subscription of $50,000 to fund which the president wanted and his successful efforts to raise the remaining $150,000 could have no other purpose than to purchase immunity. And he must have understood that a promise of immunity was implied in the president's request for aid.

Mr. Harriman's letter contrasts strangely with the president's indignant denial on November 4, 1904, of Judge Alton B. Parker's charge of a few days earlier "that the trusts are furnishing the money with which they hope to control the election."

Judge Parker, then the Democratic candidate for the presidency, did not know that the trusts were supplying this money at the personal solicitation of his opponent or his party managers. It is probable that the president's indignant denial of the charge led Judge Parker, as it led the country at large, to believe that the president was ignorant of the transactions of Cortelyou and Bliss with the trust magnates.

"Slandorous accusations," "monstrous accusations," "unqualifiedly and atrociously false," were among the words employed by President Roosevelt in repelling Judge Parker's charges. The country believed him.

The positiveness of the denial, the force of the denunciation hurled back at his "slandering" convicted millions of American voters that the president had been made the victim of a malicious attack.

And comes Mr. Harriman and raises the question of veracity in cold type. Even the enemies of Theodore Roosevelt should hope that they may be able to put another face upon the matter than which appears in Mr. Harriman's narrative.

Denouncing corporation contributions to political parties, and at the same time prodding by them places the president in the attitude of being insincere with the people, which is one of the gravest offenses and the most unpardonable that a man in his station can commit.—St. Louis Republic.

Rev. Milley to Hold Meeting Here.

Rev. W. H. Milley, D. D. formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church at Marion, will begin a protracted meeting Monday night, April 15.
Mr. Milley was pastor of this church for ten years and many people will be glad to hear of his coming here to engage in this service. Mr. Milley is a good speaker and an earnest worker, and with God's help it is hoped that he will do much good in this community for the cause of Christ. A cordial invitation is extended to his friends to come and hear him and assist him in this noble work.

Dr. T. H. Cossitt Dead.

As we go to press news is received of the death of Dr. T. H. Cossitt, who with his wife, went to El Paso, Tex., to spend the winter with their sons, Frank and Pate. The news came as a surprise to his numerous friends and relatives here.

Geo. Woodson is quite ill at his home, on West depot street, with erysipelas and his fever is quite high.
The death of his wife is a great shock to him, and is especially distressing when he is also critically ill.

Schwab's Chickens.

Last Monday from early dawn until late at night wagons were busy hauling chickens for Schwab to the
I. C. depot to be shipped to Herndon-Carter Co., who sent a man here to buy Mr. Schwab's purchase. The shipment was the largest ever made from here and comprised 4500 fowls weighing ten tons, and the cash realized was about $1850, which is a nice sum to be realized from fowls only. Schwab also handles eggs, hides, wool, dried fruits and dozens of other things which bring money into the town.

Mrs. Geo. Woodson's Sudden Death.

Just as we go to press we learn of the death of the wife of George Woodson at their home on Wilson Avenue. She was a daughter of Dr. Ben Franklin, of Blackford, and was only twenty-six years of age and had been sick only a week.
Septic poison was the cause of death.
She leaves two children. The funeral will be at Rosebud, probably Thursday.

CHURCH NOTES

Rev. Benjamin Andrus will preach at Forest Grove school house next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The communion of the Lord's Supper was observed at the Presbyterian church last Sunday, and the sermon of the pastor was appropriate to the occasion. The text was Rom. 5, 6.
"For when we were yet without strength, Christ in due time died for the un-godly." The thought of the discourse was, that the Lord's Supper is a strength for Christ's people against sin. Sin makes man weak and the grace of God makes man strong.
Through these rites of Christianity
we receive strength from God.

An opportunity was given to those present who were not members of the church to unite themselves with God's people. Two came forward, one by letter and one upon profession of faith in Christ, and were received into the fellowship of the church.

Don't forget chicken day April 12, 9 cents cash Schwab Produce Co.

Card Of Thanks.

We desire to express our appreciation and thanks to our good neighbors for their kindness during the illness and death of our dear wife

EX-Governor Marries Blind Woman.

Newport, R. I., April 1.—One of the most beautiful of modern romances will result in the wedding early this spring when former Gov. L. F. C. Garvin and Miss Sarah Emma Tomlinson are married.

Miss Tomlinson is blind. When a little girl in her teens she was stricken, and the former Governor, a practicing physician, was called to attend her by her family, whom Mr. Garvin had known for years. He became greatly interested in the little sufferer, and continued to take an active part in restoring her sight. When specialists declared that she would always be blind, the former Governor took her education in hand and sent her to the Perkins Institute for the Blind, in Boston. There she received a complete education. Later Mr. Garvin provided for a three-year course in music.

The bride-to-be is now a woman of thirty-three, while the former Governor is sixty-six years old. Their friends say they will be the happiest couple in Rhode Island.

HEROES OF THE SEA

CAPTAINS WHO GO DOWN TO DEATH WITH THEIR SHIPS.

Working of the Honor Code in the Deep Sea—Noble Examples of "Living the Faith" When a Move to Escape Meant Dishonor.

Tradition, which is to say the honor code of the deep sea fraternity, decrees that in event of mortal disaster to a vessel of whatever kind, sail or steam, large or small, the master must be the last person to leave.

From this law, unwritten though it be, no captain is exempt. So stern is it, so inexorable and so jealously upheld, not only by those of the sea, but by landmen, that where escape is impossible for passengers and crew the commander of a stricken ship stands rigid on the bridge until she sinks, carrying with her, it may be, a score or hundreds of human beings, considering his sacrifice but slight in the face of the alternate of self preservation at a price too great for any man to pay, at the price of worldwide scorn, the averted faces of those who had formerly held him in esteem and the pain of those who had loved him as husband, father, son or brother.

Death and a name written bold on the roll of those who have perished sublimely at sea is infinitely the easier way. Many have found it so. And not a small element of the dignity and the nobility which attach to the calling of the ocean is due to that exalted army of martyrs who in the heart of fearful darkness, in the wreck of elemental fury triumphant, have kept the faith unflinchingly, alone, unwatched, unaided—men who in dying have put up a steadfast star which lends far from sordid things and ennobles the credit of mankind.

Annals of the sea record not a few instances of captains who have refused to leave their vessels even after every other human being has been saved. Love of their ships, for which many skippers evince such affection as they bestow upon wife or child, may explain this, or pride or despair, where the master has been at fault, or—oh, ever so many reasons may be advanced.

The captain of a great liner not many years ago, whose boat had met with an accident which seemed likely to bring him before a court of inquiry, was found dead in his cabin when the vessel finally made port. He brought her safely—and then he died. Apoplexy, they said at first. Later came a rumor that has never been satisfactorily explained away to the effect that this captain died by his own hand. It is not at all unlikely. He had been eminently successful. His pride could not bear up under his first great setback.

Another case of the kind was that of the suicide of Captain Brunswig of the beautiful cruising steamship Prinzessin Victoria Louise after he had run her on the rocks near Port Royal, in the West Indies. The favorable comment of the shipping world has been that the German commander did the only thing possible under the circumstances. Brunswig would probably have lost his certificate, and since steamship companies is a rule prefer to "grow" their own captains and in addition have absolutely no use for a skipper with a lost ship against his name poor Brunswig's future must have looked dark to him indeed.

It is far more pleasant to turn to the case of a man who, paradoxically enough, was not a captain, but who is one now if rewards in the next world are meted out in accordance with big, brave things done on the waters of a lower creation—to the case of Chief Officer Paterson of the British King. He left New York in that craft one winter day in 1865, and on the banks great rending waves simply beat in, in her bow plates. Tons of water flowed in, and before the leak was discovered she was listing seriously. Captain O'Hagan led his men into the hold to shift cargo and thus right the wallowing steamship.

Barrels, boxes, what not, were flying wild, and a case of machinery finally caught the captain against a brace, crushing his leg so that splintered bones were driven out through the skin. He was carried to a lifeboat made ready for launching, and Paterson took command. From his post on the bridge he never moved. Lower and lower drove the British King, and the crew of Belgians, verging on panic, but held by the personality and calm assurance of their new commander, watched him like dogs ready to obey his will. From his post the chief officer signaled the Mannheim and the Bostonian, which were plunging through the riotous waters to the rescue, and he it was that maneuvered the sinking craft so that small boats from the surviving vessels could come alongside. Three boats filled with the British King's men were carried to safety, and as the storm increased, prohibiting further attempts at rescue, the stricken vessel took her long plunge, with Paterson on the bridge blowing a farewell blast upon his mate's whistle.

"Paterson was fine, Paterson was noble," said an officer of the British King brought to New York on the Mannheim. "He was not a captain. But when he took O'Hagan's place he took O'Hagan's responsibilities without a murmur and died as O'Hagan would like to have died." As it was, O'Hagan was the first man by Paterson's express order to be lowered into the rescue boats. He died the day before the Mannheim reached port. The British King was only a freighter. There were no passengers aboard, but Paterson saw his light clear and acted in accordance with it.

Even more dramatic was the death of Captain Deloncle of the ill fated French liner La Bourgogne, rammed and sunk by the Cronautyshire, a sailing vessel, on the banks in the summer of 1898. La Bourgogne was a gilded ship, and her commander was the pride of the line. He was a poet, influenced in style by Edgar Allan Poe and by Baudelaire, not only in style of verse, but in demeanor, the last no doubt inherent. His conversation was brilliant, but fantastic. As a raconteur his trend was morbid, melancholic, his humor satiric—in other words, no ordinary man and a good sailor. On the evening of the disaster the liner ran into a dense fog. Deloncle was on the bridge, considering abstractedly no doubt new poetic themes while watching, waiting, guiding his immense vessel with her thousand odd passengers through the pall.

Suddenly out of the darkness, with out a sound, rushed a tall bark, which dealt her deathblow, and then stole away in the darkness toward a Canadian port, into which she crawled, like the murderer she was, some days later. La Bourgogne was sinking. The crew had gone mad and, assisted by the crazed coal passers and firemen thronging up from below, were stabbing and beating the passengers—men and women who ran about as senseless cattle run. Deloncle saw all this from the bridge, but he was powerless to do anything. Some of his officers had fought to suppress the panic at the cost no doubt of their lives; others were at the boats. Lower and lower went La Bourgogne. Her captain seems now to have abandoned himself to a mood of strange exaltation in the presence of death, for he seized the whistle rope, and while steam lasted his wild, wailing, roaring salute to death rocked over the heads of those who were drowning below him. And with this last salute Deloncle bade farewell to the face of the sea.

Captain Griffith of the Atlantic Transport line steamship Mohegan ran his vessel on the rocks near the Needles, in the English channel, in October, 1898, under conditions which, had he lived, would have justified capital punishment. It was not darker than twilight, landfalls were unshrouded, and yet the Mohegan, miles out of her course, went on the rocks and sank with most of her passengers. Griffith directed his crew from the bridge, without avail, however, as the work of lowering the boats was bungled atrociously. The last seen of him he was still on the bridge, shaking his fist and cursing the waters as they rose over the deck or the floundering crew or both.

Admiral Tryon, standing on the afterdeck of the British battleship Cumberland, had no thought other than dying with his great flagship as she sank in the Mediterranean off Tripoli after collision with the battleship Victoria. Tryon had given the signal calling for a maneuver within dangerous distance, and its disastrous ending placed him in such position that no doubt he deemed death a far simpler solution to the problems that must have flashed through his mind.

Inspired by the ethics of his profession and by the dignity of his office, Captain Thoms Augustus Craven of the monitor Tecumseh died in a way that will live as long as the history of this country lives. His monitor was one of the vessels attached to Admiral Farragut's squadron, then collected for the attack on Mobile. On the morning of Aug. 5, 1864, the Tecumseh, in the post of honor at the head of the attacking squadron, engaged the defenses of the city. The orders to fleet captains were that in order to avoid torpedoes at the entrance to the bay vessels must pass to the eastward of a certain red buoy, which was directly under the guns of Fort Morgan. The Confederate ram Tennessee was lying to port of the Tecumseh and inside the line of torpedoes. Captain Craven, in his eagerness to engage this craft, neglected the course warning and passed to the westward of the buoy. The penalty was immediate. There was a muffled explosion, the monitor listing sharply. As she began swiftly to sink Captain Craven and his pilot, John Collins, met at the foot of the ladder leading to the top of the turret—a ladder of iron leading to a manhole above, to safety. The turret was nearly submerged. There would be time for one to mount the ladder perhaps, but only one. The pilot knew this; Craven knew it. There was no hesitation. With a smile Craven stepped away from the ladder.

"After you, pilot," he said. Collins sprang up the ladder, and as he gained the top round the vessel went to the bottom and Craven, the "Sydney of the American navy," with her.

In a humbler but wonderfully heroic way the captain of the oil ship Loodnaw, burned at sea several years ago, saw every man jack of his crew clear of the doomed ship before thinking of his own safety. Then it was too late. Foot by foot he was driven forward until he hung over the bow, the flames shooting far out above him. A tramp steamship came up. It was too rough to lower, and there she stayed, watching the unequal fight on the part of a man who could not know that human eyes were upon him and human hearts aching for him—stayed until at last the man relaxed and cleaved the dark waters, while his ship burned on.

There are many such as he—men who have fought the good fight and died calmly where they might have lived—whose names will never be known, whose deeds are enwrapped in that mystery which invests the sea. But, for that matter, it is not for glory that a captain sacrifices his comfort or happiness or life. It is only because his calling includes such things as a part of everyday routine. —Lawrence Perry in New York Post.

A man one day in early summer drove down the road when a very hard wind came up. There was no shelter, excepting an apple tree, and under its spreading bows he stopped his wagon. The wind blew harder, and the branches swished and were disturbed as they never had before, and the man feared for his life. But wind grew less violent and slowly subsided, when the clouds floated away and the sun shone. Then the man drove away with his wagon bed full of fine apples, which the ill wind had blown him.

In Memorium.

John Moore spent his entire life of eighty years in Crittenden county, having been born here April 22, 1825, and died March 6, 1907. He was three times married and was the father of live children, three of whom are still living. His last marriage was to Miss Mary B. French, March 6, 1872 and with whom he lived thirty-five years to the day. She is left to mourn his loss.

He was a good citizen, neighbor, devoted husband and fond father. Bro. Moore, in 1878, professed religion and joined the Methodist church at Siloam and was a member the remainder of his life. The last ten years of his life he was in bad health and but little from home. For two years previous to his death he was a constant sufferer, but bore his sufferings with patience and never murmured at his lot.

His funeral services were conducted at his home by the writer, after which his remains were taken to Chapel Hill cemetery where they were laid to rest and await God's call.

May the peace of God, which passeth understanding, abide with the devoted and suffering widow, and His grace be sufficient for all the loved ones who remain here.

Proof of Merit

The proof of the merits of a plaster in the cures it effects, and voluntary testimonial of those who have used Alcock's Plasters during the past sixty years is unimpeachable evidence of their superiority and should convince the most skeptical. Self-praise is no recommendation, but certificates from those who have used them are.

Alcock's are the original and genuine porous plasters and have never been equaled by those who have sought to trade upon their reputation by making plasters with holes in them. Avoid substitutes as you would counterfeit money.

A MILITARY DESPOT.

The Experience of One Private in the German Army.

The following is the experience of a German army private:

During the second maneuvers I was sent on ahead to select quarters for my company. The police supply the names of householders who are expected to shelter the soldiery, and I had to decide on the number of men who should be assigned to each place.

It seems that our major dispatched a courier with a message for our captain. For some reason or other the message was not delivered. The next day the captain called me out and in the presence of the whole company rebuked me for not delivering the message.

"I did not receive any message," I ventured.

"Shut up your mouth, you liar!" he thundered. And again he belittled. "Why didn't you deliver that message, you?"

I told him a second time that I had not received any message. The captain's temper broke all bounds. With an oath he rode his horse at me full tilt, hurling filthy names at me the while.

When he had ridden right up to me—I fully expected he would run me over, but I dared not move—he suddenly reined in his horse and, drawing a long dagger from his belt, shouted, livid with passion, "I have half a mind to stick this through your vile body, you Schweinhund!"

Once more he asked me about the message, and once more I answered, him.

"Then five days' confinement and bread and water be your punishment, you liar!" he retorted.

He repeated the question several times and increased my term of imprisonment each time I answered in the negative until my term of imprisonment equaled fourteen days. I was placed under arrest. Next day I was released.

Afterward found that the captain had discovered his mistake, but he never referred to it.—World Today.

BIRTH OF A "GASSER."

Noise of a Blowing Well Drowned All Other Sounds.

In the Broadway Magazine is a story by Rupert Hughes concerning the oil wells of Texas. He tells of the birth of a "gasser."

"It screamed like the death cry of a thousand panthers." He says: "The long steel cable has been sent flying like a twine string. A great length of pipe has been hurled against a tree and wrapped around it. The derrick was almost hidden in a white haze. A geyser of the sand was streaming upward and ending away the lofty crown block.

"Seth knew what it was. He found Tom, and they gesticulated at each other. They made faces, but no audible sound. Their voices were vain as candles in the full sunlight. Each was trying to yell the same thing.

"She's a gasser, blowing her head off."

"Men gathered from everywhere and noted like crazy folk, working their faces and delivering no message.

"They were soaked, drowned, obliterated in a sea of intolerable noise. A mile away at the railroad station the passengers were equally made dumb by the uproar. If a man wanted a ticker he had to write out the name of the station. An engine rumbled in with a bell that rocked without sound and a whistle emitting puffs of white steam that no one heard.

"The animals of the region were greatly disturbed. There was much breaking of harness on the part of horses, and one or two galloped about under empty saddles. Their riders were doubtless stuck in the mud somewhere, head first.

"A few pigs wandering here and there had sufficed at the noise and returned to their luxurious wallows in the oily muck."

Pretty Crooked.

People who have seen cottonwood lumber warp when it came from the saw can appreciate a story about the first sawmill erected at Fort Scott. After the first day's sawing the owner of the mill came down from town, where he had been celebrating the "opening" with the boys. He looked over the crooked boards scattered about the yard for a moment and then inquired with drunken gravity:

"Boys! did, has that lumber been measured yet?"

"It has not," replied the foreman of the mill.

"Well, when it gets still, take a (hic) corkscrew and measure it."

Essential to Biography.

Some years ago Norman Hapgood was arranging the data for his "Life of Lincoln." When he sat down to write the opening chapter, he was confronted with a puzzle. Hurrying to an adjoining room of the paper, on the staff of which he was a shining light, he asked the editor, "By the way, what was Lincoln's first name, Abram or Abraham?"

Avoiding Trouble.

"Those candidates are telling some terrible lies about one another."

"Yes. But, you see, it would mean shooting on sight if they were to tell the truth about one another."—Houston Post.

Always After Us.

"No matter what we do, there is one class of people who will always be after us."

"Who are they?"

"Posterity."—Baltimore American.

We Trust Doctors

If you are suffering from impure blood, thin blood, debility, nervousness, exhaustion, you should begin at once with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the Sarsaparilla you have known all your life. Your doctor knows it, too. Ask him about it.

You must look well after the condition of your liver and bowels. Unless there is daily action of the bowels, poisons produce are absorbed, causing headache, biliousness, nausea, dyspepsia, and thus preventing the Sarsaparilla from doing its best work. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. Act gently, all vegetable. The dose is only one pill at bedtime.

His Dear Old Mother

"My dear old mother, who is now eighty three years old thrives on Electric Bitters," writes W. B. Brunson, of Dublin, Ga. "She has taken them for about two years and enjoys an excellent appetite, feels strong and sleeps well." That's the way Electric Bitters affect the aged, and the same happy results follow in all cases of female weakness and general debility. Weak, puny children too, are greatly strengthened by them. BLINDED BY SNEEZING Peculiar Serious Affliction to Lady in Trenton, N. J.

New York, April 1.—Mrs. Joseph H. Jack, a resident of Trenton, N. J., is blind as a result of a violent attack of sneezing. Mrs. Jack was exhausted by the violent sneezing and fell asleep. When she awoke in the morning she was unable to see.

The physicians believe the violence of the sneezing caused hemorrhage of the blood vessels of the eyes.

Rheumatic sufferers can have a free sample of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy with book on Rheumatism by simply writing Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. This book will explain how Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy successfully drives Rheumatism out of the blood. This remedy is not a relief only. It aims to clear the blood entirely of Rheumatic poisons, and then Rheumatism must die a natural death. Sold by Haynes & Taylor.

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package.

For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Sold by Haynes & Taylor.

Diabolical Deed.

The infant son of W. J. Ray, of Kuttawa, was very badly burned Monday. Some child gave him a sack of powder and a match and told him to burn it and the little fellow stood over it and stuck the match to it. The powder flew all over his face and hands, but fortunately his eyes were not burned. A large boy who would do such a trick as that should be sent to the House of Reform, but authorities have not been able to get the culprit as yet. —Eddyville Herald.
